prologue

"More has been done for culture in the last six years in Germany than in the last hundred years in England."—HITLER.

"That I love peace is shown by my work."—HITLER.

"The German people is the freest people in the world."—GOEBBELS.

"We demand that flogging be instituted without any further delay, and that it be executed before as great a public as possible. We demand that the good old German custom of pillorying law breakers be reinstated. It is much too human and liberal to place law breakers into prisons. We must exterminate them entirely from our pure German race. We must create places of exile where suitably hard conditions of life are established."—DR. SCHUETT, OF THE HEALTH DEPARTMENT.

"We are not and do not want to be the land of Goethe and Einstein. Anything but that."—BERLIN LOKALANZEIGER.

"Hitler is lonely. So is God. Hitler is like God."—DR. FRANK, REICH MINISTER FOR JUSTICE.

"I am Providence."

"I am the first soldier of the German Reich."

"The German people have no thought of invading any country."

"Poland must be taught a lesson; she must crawl or get her whipping."

". . . thus I march at the head of my people . . ."

"Our Hermann."

"I am humane. You should not laugh. I really am humane."— GOERING.

"I would rather shoot a few times too short and too wide, but in any case I would shoot."

"We don't ask anything of you that we, the leaders, are unwilling to bear ourselves. Too much fat creates big bellies.
I have been eating less butter and have reduced twenty pounds."

"Minister of Propaganda and Enlightenment . . ."

"With satisfaction we know that truth will always come out on top. We give nothing, then, but the naked truth."

"Intellectual activity is a danger to the building of character."

"Our critics are morbid, degenerate, democratic individuals. Some even say the Jew is a human being."

"I treasure an ordinary prostitute above a married Jewess."

"Lies cannot disturb the German people's calm balance of mind."

“This Christmas we shall celebrate in the emptied premises of the Jews.”—STREICHER, NOVEMBER 1938.

“Heil Hitler—Juda Verrecke!”

The heirs.

Hindenburg; his son; Hitler; Goering.

"I should not make this Herr Hitler even Postmaster-General."
—HINDENBURG.

"I am more than forty years younger than you. I shall be here a long time after you are dead."—HITLER.

Rudolf Hess. The Fuehrer's Deputy.

“Whatever he does is right; whatever he does is necessary; and whatever he does is successful. . . . Thus manifestly the Fuehrer has the divine blessing.”

Himmler, Chief of the Gestapo.

“If necessary, I shall shoot thousands of Czechs. And if this fails the whole Czech nation will be exterminated.”

Captain Hierl, Secretary of State for the Labour Service.

"My Fuehrer, I report the army of the spade all present and correct."

". . . Pacifism is a political weapon, and is actually useful in preparing war. By lulling the enemy to sleep with pacific phrases, it strives to make him neglect his armaments. The lulling vapours diffused about the enemy are also calculated to conceal our own armaments."

German heads . . .

Strength through Joy.

“Living-space is fundamental for the happiness and development of a people.”—HITLER.

"Germany is awake!"

"If Halifax declares that he stands for culture, I answer, Sir, we had a culture when you had no idea of what culture was."

—HITLER.

Professor Theodor Lessing. Shot at his desk, through the window, by a Nazi bullet, in 1933. He was a pacifist and a Jew.

“The Jew is no human being.”—Official Gazette of German Justice.

“We have no inferiority complex—far from it.”—HITLER.

“All that you are you are through me. And all that I am I am through you.”—HITLER.

“Our will crushes hell and death. We are resolved. We are ready.”—HITLER.

“Without the German nation there would be barbarism.”—HITLER.

“If non-Nordics are more closely allied to monkeys and apes than the Nordics, why is it possible for them to mate with Nordics and not with apes? The answer is, this: It has not been proved that non-Nordics cannot mate with apes . . .”—FROM The New Bases of Racial Research, BY H. GAUCH.

“ . . . to thank you, my dear Ernst Roehm, for the imperishable services you have rendered to the National Socialist movement and to the German people, and to assure you how grateful I am to destiny for allowing me to describe such a man as yourself as my friend and fellow fighter. In cordial friendship and grateful esteem, your Adolf Hitler.”—BIRTHDAY LETTER, PUBLISHED IN THE GERMAN PAPERS, SHORTLY BEFORE HITLER HAD ROEHM SHOT IN JULY 1934.

“Our Fuehrer—a man more tremendous than fate.”

The Nazi Youth flags—“I see in them not only a symbol of the Nazi movement but also the earthly form in which the eternal God has revealed himself.”

General Ludendorff. German hero.

“The rabbit, it is certain, is no German animal, if only for its painful timidity. It is an immigrant who enjoys a guest’s privilege. As for the lion, one sees in him indisputably German fundamental characteristics. Thus one could call him a German abroad.”

epilogue

"I believe in Germany, God's other beloved son, God of himself conceived beneath the Nordic heavens; born between the Alps and the sea, suffered under popes and worshippers of Mammon, libelled, mishandled and impoverished, tortured by devils of all varieties to the gates of hell, after decades of poverty and misery it has arisen again from political and national death, ascended into the spiritual and intellectual community of Eckhart, Bach and Goethe, and sitteth between the great brother of Nazareth to the right hand of God the Father Almighty. Thence it shall come in its sacred character to judge those alive and dead."—VERSION OF THE APOSTLES' CREED. BERLIN, 1938.

The Three Dictators Revised Second Edition

by Frank Owen

Illustrated. La. Cr. 8vo.

7s. 6d.

Frank Owen, the editor of the Evening Standard, brings within the compass of a single volume the life-stories of the three men who, by their amazing personalities and political sagacity, have come to hold within their hands the whole destiny of the civilized world: Mussolini, Stalin, and Hitler. All three are of humble origin, sons respectively of a blacksmith, an impoverished bootmaker, and a petty official. Two were destined by their mothers for priesthood. All have lived the lives of outcasts and prisoners and fugitives, and all have known the deepest poverty. They have much in common in their temperaments and experience, but they have differences too. Frank Owen makes the differences and the likenesses vividly clear.

These three portraits, carefully linked, are masterpieces of concise and dramatic writing. The subjects' own words are dexterously welded into the narrative. A book of first-rate readability.

"Mr Owen . . . has found plenty that is new to say about Mussolini, Stalin, and Hitler, and he has not confined himself to biographical details. For that reason alone this is a contribution of singular value to the history of the baleful totalitarian drama which began to unfold itself a couple of decades ago . . . a mere record of facts could only be impossibly bulky and encyclopaedic, so a peppering of piquant views, together with a sense of humour never far in the background, is the more excellent way."—PHILIP PAGE in Daily Mail

The German People versus Hitler

by Heinrich Fraenkel

Demy 8vo. 10s. 6d.

In this book the author shows that the forces of German opposition (reaching from the extreme political Right to the extreme Left) once they are sufficiently unified, are bound to smash Hitlerism, and that Democracy's most powerful ally in the fight against Hitlerism is the German people.

From the beginning of hostilities the existence and strength of the opposition within Germany has been manifest, and it will go from strength to strength if the British and French High Command continue and intensify their efforts in dropping leaflets—not bombs—and appeal direct to the German people in their fight against Hitlerism.

The book is also a magnificent survey and interpretation of Hitler and Hitlerism. But it is primarily occupied in describing in detail the growth of the underground opposition, its activities and methods and achievements, from the moment of Hitler's accession to power to the early weeks of the war. Of special interest are details of illegal printed propaganda, the illegal radio, the make-up of political "cells," and Himmler's own plans for keeping down the German people during wartime. Fraenkel's conclusion is that Hitler's days are now numbered. The author is an active member of the German opposition in Britain.
